Trafford Hall

National Communities Resource Centre

The National Communities Resource Centre was created at Trafford Hall in 1991 to provide training and support to low income communities. Our work addresses the skills gap, social isolation, ethnic polarisation and environmental degradation that damages poor communities.

Since 1995, the charity has supported over 100,000 people to develop the skills and confidence to help themselves and their communities.

Trafford Hall provides an opportunity for disadvantaged people to step out of their everyday lives and come together in a friendly, green environment to uncover practical new ways to tackle old problems.

Cuts to government funding mean we need all our Friends to help us continue to drive real, positive change in communities across the country.

How can you help?

Become a Friend and your donation will support our training and help us maintain Trafford Hall.
